KILPATRICK JR TAKES ALIMENTA ACQUISITION: The Virginia-based operator of NASCAR Sprint Cup race tracks on Friday announced plans to acquire the meat-industry company. Alimenta is the largest meatpacker in the world, buying and processing more than 5,700,000 animals annually for major food and feed companies including Tyson Foods, Cargill, and Koch Foods. The deal will include a stock swap valued at approximately $377 million and will also subject the company to the Kilpatrick's expanded NASCAR racing and entertainment facilities. The acquisition is subject to regulatory approvals. GENERAL MOTORS UP ON AUTOS: The General Motors Co. has said it is bullish on the U.S. auto industry following steep profit losses at European luxury-car maker Opel AG. GM also said it is planning a fleet of smaller-car models for North America. "We are ready to be a better-positioned company," GM North America Chief Executive Officer Mark Reuss said Friday. "A small, affordable, efficient Chevrolet would be a nice complement to the Cadillacs, Buicks and Chevrolets that we have already." The company has cut back its full-year production guidance after a particularly weak fourth quarter because of the downturn in the U.S. economy. VIRGINIANS PLAN TO FIGHT TRAFFIC: Virginia residents are ready to protest a proposed traffic plan that would limit access to their neighborhoods as roads are expanded by right-of-way needed for the $3.2 billion Silver Line commuter rail project. Right-of-way is needed for tracks, overhead wires and platforms. The plan has been in the works since 2010, and opponents say recent changes have left it more restrictive and inaccessible to some residents. "We think the [Department of Rail and Public Transportation] has a plan that treats everyone equally and fairly, but we strongly object to that, and we will
